1964

JOHN F. KENNEDY

"My fellow Americans, ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country."

These words spoken by John F. Kennedy on January 20, 1961, in his inaugural address, will always be remembered in the hearts of Americans.

But perhaps best remembered will be the man himself. His accomplishments, ideas, and the free democracy which he so nobly represents. He had a style and a sense of history that assure us his influence and inspirations will not come to an end. He gave the extra-ordinary impression of being alive. He was life-affirming, life-enhancing. No one had such vitality of personality - a vitality so superbly disciplined that while sometimes he left the impression of cool detachment, it imbued everything he thought or did with intense concentration and power. His curiosity was unlimited. The restless thrust of his mind never abated. He noticed everything, responded to everything, forgot nothing. He lived his life so intensely that in retrospect it almost seems he must have known it would be short, and that he had no time to waste. Or perhaps it was that, having lived close to death ever since he swam those lonely, terrible hours along Ferguson Passage in 1943, ever since he nearly died after the operation on his back in 1955, he was determined to savor life to the full.

And when he fell in whirlwind he went down
As when a lordly cedar, green with boughs,
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills,
And leaves a lonesome place against the sky.

Edwin Markham on the assassination of A. Lincoln.

It is to this man, the late President John F. Kennedy, that we, the staff of the TROJAN, dedicate our 1964 edition of the TROJAN.
